

WODA, CEDA, EADA, WEDA, EuDA and IADC explained

	Logo	Geography	Members	Member segments		Objectives
WODA World Organisation of Dredging Associations		World	CEDA, WEDA EADA	N.A.
CEDA Central Dredging Association		Europe, Middle East Africa - EMEA	Individuals and organisations from academia, government and private businesses (see next column)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Academic bodies and educational institutions Consultancies and research institutes Designers, builders and suppliers of ancillary equipment Designers, builders and suppliers of dredging vessels Dredging companies (private and state-owned) Government organisations and public works Media Port, maritime and navigational authorities Professional and branch associations, environmental NGOs Services (e.g. banks, insurers, law firms, financial agencies, towage companies) Other 		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Independent, no lobbying Centre of expertise on dredging and reclamation Forum for knowledge exchange and extensive professional network Objective, expert input to regulatory bodies
EADA Eastern Dredging Association		Far East and Pacific
WEDA Western Dredging Association		Americas
EuDA European Dredging Association		European Union	Private dredging companies	Private dredging companies		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Representation of the European dredging companies Lobbying: interfacing with EU institutions Objective: fair and equitable conditions for competition
IADC International Association of Dredging Companies		World	Private dredging companies	Private dredging companies		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Inform about dredging Improve business climate Promotion of the dredging industry Fair competition Standards of Professional Conduct